SCHOOL DIRECTORS HEAR HEALTH TALKS AT SPRING MEETING

Office of School Director is Important One, Says
One Speaker

ROLAND EATON SPEAKS

Dr. Raymond D. Tice Speaks
On "Better Health for School Children of Quakertown"

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 17.—Better health for our school children and other problems pertinent to school directors were discussed yesterday by experts at the Spring meeting of the Bucks County School Directors' Association at the Court House, with 300 men and women in attendance. With one exception all speakers were directors at yesterday's meeting.

One of the outstanding talks was given by Roland Eaton, a Swarthmore school director and member of the school board of District 8 of the Pennsylvania State School Directors' Association.

"Of all our civic jobs of responsibility the office of school director is by far the most important," Eaton declared. "We have councilmen and mayors but the school director has the real important job."

The speaker said that he has always been "highly impressed with the Bucks county school directors at the State conventions."

The Swarthmore school director said that in his opinion school directors in many instances in Pennsylvania are being too greatly influenced by "professional educators."

"Professional educators are okay, they have their place, but if they cannot see other than the professional side, they don't amount to much," Eaton declared.

"We have been pretty selfish in education and we have directors too, who are no more than politicians who are looking for a job for a janitor friend, and we have school teachers who are selfish too—all in the same boat. Or you may be a director so you can get something for your own children."

Mr. Eaton said that he got enough out of the talk given by Dr. Raymond D. Tice at the morning session to pay him for the entire visit to Doylestown. Dr. Tice spoke on Quakertown's outstanding project of "better health for the school children of Quakertown."

"The three R's no longer suffice for modern citizenship," Eaton declared. "The one who has good health is a much better citizen. Our trouble in the United States has been that we have always treated the condition and not the cause."

"I sincerely hope that the State Legislature will soon pass a law creating a commission to really study and make a survey of the educational needs of Pennsylvania. If we want to make our democracy safe we must raise our boys and girls to be useful and employed in society. The man who is useful and can be employed is not good material for a dictator to work on."

"I am a strong believer of self government and we have the best communities in this country where self government exists, but I am not stubborn to the extent that my own or your own community must carry the entire burden. What I want to see is equality of opportunity in education. I also want to see the teaching profession in America put on a higher plane, and this in a great way, is up to the teachers too."

"When we put a teacher in the school room we are buying more than a professional person, we are putting in someone who must know how to teach manhood and womanhood, a person with the right slant on life and the proper attitude toward young people and the community in which they are located."

"But, my friends, you cannot put that type of teacher in office for $750 a year. We have to pay teachers enough to attract good people to the profession. Let's keep the unit out of the teaching profession and let's set up some real teacher standards in Pennsylvania."

Dr. W. A. Roberts, of Newtown, president of the Pennsylvania State School Directors' Association, was given a big hand when he addressed the afternoon session yesterday. He spoke particularly on the value of the State Association and said that he was sure that Bucks county is not getting all it should out of the State Association.

Yesterday's session was presided over by Walter J. Growney, of Bridge-town, president of the county association. During the business session, Dr. Raymond Tice, Quakertown, W. S. Solly, Northampton township and Mrs. Naylor, Wrightstown, were elected members of the County Board, Tice and Solly for 6-year terms and Mrs. Taylor for 2 years.

Norwegians Attack Germans

Stockholm, Apr. 17.—Norwegian troops attacked German detachments in southeastern Norway today, and retired to the East, a Norwegian military communique announced.

The war bulletin said that fighting continued north of Kongsvinger, and at Lake Mjosa, near Hakedal, where Norwegian ski troops successfully counter-attacked the German flank.

Fresh German parachute troops were annihilated or taken prisoners, while in other parts of the country, the communique said, the general military position remained unchanged.

In northern Norway, British troops contacted Norwegian forces, according to the bulletin.

Mine New Areas

London, Apr. 17.—The British Admiralty announced today that the submarine "Thistle," operating in the North Sea, is considerably overdue at its home base, and must be presumed to have been lost.

The Admiralty also announced that waters around the River Clyde, center of Britain's shipbuilding industry, have been mined.

The announcement was interpreted as an answer to German statements that newly-established submarine bases in Norway soon would be used for operations against England.

Germans Retreating From Narvik

New York, Apr. 17.—A London radio broadcast picked up by N. B. C. today, stated that German forces are retreating from the Norwegian port of Narvik, and moving farther into the interior of Norway, toward the Swedish frontier.

Germany Massing Troops

Paris, Apr. 17.—Reports that Germany is massing troops along the Yugoslavian frontier reached Paris today. Other dispatches told of "incidents" along the Russo-Rumanian border.

PRESCRIBES RIGID TESTS FOR CAR LICENSE MATERIAL

Tags Required To Stand Up
Under All Sorts of Weather Conditions

MUST BE GOOD QUALITY

HARRISBURG, Apr. 17.—Materials that go into the making of Pennsylvania's automobile license tags are now required to pass stringent tests before they are given final approval by the State.

The tags must stand up under all sorts of weather conditions, and accordingly call for strict supervision, not only as to their manufacture, but as to the quality of the steel, paint and varnish that go into their makeup.

The paint test is now one of the most rigid tests conducted by the State in preparing for manufacture of the tags. Competing vendors, once they have submitted their samples for testing do not know their own products as the tests proceed as samples are identified only by a code number.

The preliminary tests are held at the Western State Penitentiary, Pottsville, where the tags are made. A more detailed chemical analysis test is conducted by the State Highways laboratory at Harrisburg.

The preliminary tests are conducted by representatives of the State Bureau of Standards, the Highways Testing laboratory, the Department of Revenue, and the Prison Labor Division of the Department of Welfare.

Samples of as many competing types of background paint, numeral ink and varnish as are presented for consideration are poured into pans for the first physical tests. Other samples are set aside for the six and 12-hour baking tests.

In the preliminary tests tags are eliminated that show different conditions unsuitable for use in the method of production. Tags showing paint of poor flow, poor dip are thus rejected at the Penitentiary.

Materials successful in passing the preliminary tests at the Penitentiary are brought to Harrisburg for Department of Highways laboratory examination. In the laboratory analysis the background material and numeral ink must meet certain chemical standards. The laboratory varnish test answers the purpose of a weather test and shows whether or not the finished tag will stand a year of weathering. Blue steel will be used in the manufacture of 1941 tags. In years when the background is to be blue, the specifications call for blue steel tags, which are better suited to receive this coloring material.

Every week during production of the tags, daily samples are submitted for continued tests at the laboratory. Complete check is kept on color and quality of the material being used to insure against paint materials falling below standards set in the initial tests.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Miss Margaret Watkins, of the Morrisville High faculty, today announced the list of local students who will participate in the Bucks County Scholastic Meet, scheduled for Perkassie-Sellersville on Saturday, May 11.

The meet, for grammar students, will have Morrisville students entered in five subjects. For reading, Donald Wallis is the representative and Nancy Salisbury the alternate; English, Reed Pratt the representative and James Murray the alternate; spelling, Betty Rose the representative and Adolph Wendel the alternate; penmanship, Lillian Krysa the representative and Veronica Leash the alternate; and arithmetic, Fred Krantz the representative and Dorothy Rietzle the alternate. All are students of the eighth grade with the exception of Miss Rietzle, who is in seventh.

Individual awards will be given the winners. For first a gold medal will be given, a silver for second and bronze for third. Ribbons will be awarded for fourth and fifth places.

At least 300 people attended the first indoor clambake ever held in Doylestown at the post home of Doylestown Post, No. 175, Veterans of Foreign Wars, West Ashland and South Clinton streets, Doylestown, Sunday afternoon from four until 11 o'clock.

"Hank" Walton, youthful County Seat swingster, and his "Merry Makers" furnished the music for dancing. The guests came from Souderton, Germantown, Southampton, Perkassie, Lansdale and other places.

Leo Kline, of Germantown, was the chef for the indoor clambake.

A meeting of the Bucks County Jersey Cattle Club was held last night in the Court House, Doylestown.

The speaker of the evening was Ray L. Williams, formerly manager of Many Springs Farm, but now of Pennhurst Farm, Narberth, who talked on the "Breeding of the Jersey Cow for the Best Profit."

Election of officers featured the monthly meeting of the South Langhorne Fire Company. A good representation of the membership was present as Philip Lawrence, Jr., was elected president to succeed Joseph Keating, the retired head of the company.

Other officers elected: Vice-president, George Blittle; recording and financial secretary, James Langan; treasurer, Bertie Sylvester; trustees for a term of three years, Patrick Keating, John Lappan and Robert Keim; chief, Joseph H. Lukens; first assistant, Fred Hewins; second assistant, Alfred Buccell; third assistant, Howard Potter; delegates to the County Firemen's Association, Philip Lawrence, Jr., James Langan, Fred Cockitt, Howard Potter and Harry Koehler.

Extensive plans were discussed for participation in the annual firemen's parade to be held in Perkassie on Saturday, June 29th. Plans for uniforms and a marching club were discussed. The company plans to work with the auxiliary on this event. If present plans are successful, South Langhorne will be well represented at the annual event.

An attractive new combination siren and warning light has been ordered on trial by the company. This unit will supply a necessary safety and warning device for the fire apparatus. Following the meeting, the unit was displayed and demonstrated to the members by Chief Lukens.

Screens for the fire hall also formed a subject of discussion. Bids for material are to be asked and a special meeting will be called to consider this question together with other business in the near future.

The WPA project will do the construction work on the screens and will also hang them provided the material is supplied by the company.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

The Showdown Due

Washington, April 16.
SOON or late there is sure to be a showdown between the President and his Postmaster General, long-time political manager and friend, Mr. James A. Farley. Nothing else makes sense. It will come in a few days. It is unreasonable to think that men in their positions, whose relations, personally, politically and officially, have been so long and so close, should continue at variance without a clearer understanding.

as a whole were a little more discerning or the White House publicity a little less protective. It could hardly exist. When Mr. Roosevelt publicly speaks of Mr. Farley, he says he is a "grand fellow," refers to him as "Good Old Jim" or "My Old Nurse." When Mr. Farley speaks of the President, he lauds his Administration and calls him "Our Great President."

YET the whole country knows that the old tie between them has been broken; that a breach exists and neither now has the complete confidence of the other. In politics ruptures like this can be—and have been—healed overnight. Perhaps this one will be, but if it is it will have to be on the President's initiative and after considerable Presidential explanation. Because, Mr. Farley's friends say, he has nothing to explain nor excuse. From the start he has been in the open and on the level.

THE last really heart-to-heart talk he had with the President

The guests presented Mr. and Mrs. Tingle with a card table and four chairs.

A social time and refreshments were enjoyed by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Booz, Miss Dora Thompson, Bristol; George Colville, Bridgewater; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reichert, Holmesburg.

BRISTOL GIRL FOUND ILL IN A TRENTON DOORWAY

Miss Frances Tamburello, 511
Pond Street, Reportedly Takes Poison

ARGUES WITH LOVER

Apparently disturbed over an argument with her boy friend, a Bristol girl was found lying in a Trenton doorway yesterday after allegedly taking poison. Miss Frances Tamburello, 31, 511 Pond street, is resting at her home today weak from the effects of the hospital treatment.

At the Tamburello home today the father of the girl said that she appeared to be recovering and although weak that she did not show any ill effects of having taken a small quantity of what is thought to have been iodine.

Three Bristol young men were driving along Broad street in Trenton yesterday, when their attention was attracted to a girl lying in the doorway of a tavern on South Broad street near Greenwood avenue. They recognized the girl as being from Bristol and on investigation they found that she was crying. The trio, Louis Angellio, Dorrance street; Anthony Cullura, Dorrance street; and Anthony Belmont, Washington street, called an ambulance and Miss Tamburello was rushed to St. Francis Hospital. This was about three o'clock yesterday afternoon and at five o'clock she was discharged from the institution and brought to her home by her father. Miss Tamburello's mouth and hands were stained.

Trenton police stated that they

CO-OPERATION OF PEOPLE NEEDED IN FIGHT ON CANCER

Dr. R. W. Teahan, Jeannes
Hospital Surgeon, Brings
Message of Hope

AT LOCAL MEETING

Through Slides Shows Cure of Cancer Diagnosed in The Early Stages

"Unless we doctors have your co-operation, we cannot make much headway in the control of cancer."

This was one of the statements made by Dr. Roscoe W. Teahan, as he brought a message of hope for cancer cure through early diagnosis, when a meeting for women of the community was held in the Travel Club home yesterday afternoon. Dr. Teahan is medical director and surgeon at the Jeannes Hospital, Fox Chase.

Mrs. Gustav Ketterer, Philadelphia, state commander of the Women's Field Army for the Control of Cancer, was another speaker of the afternoon, and she told the 75 women gathered for this informative program, that "The Women's Field Army is on the march. It is a unique army in that it is organized to save lives, not to kill—and its weapon is knowledge." Mrs. Ketterer was presented to the audience by Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr., Langhorne, chairman of the Women's Field Army in Bucks County; while Dr. Teahan, and Dr. Mary Lehman, the latter representing the Bucks County Medical Society, were introduced by Mrs. Minerva Epstein, of the Division of Health Education, Pennsylvania Department of Health.

Slides were used by Dr. Teahan to graphically present his message. He emphasized time and again the need of early diagnosis in this battle against cancer. Not only did he stress the need of thorough physical examination, probably on the birthday anniversary, but examination of any lump, even if painless; of any ulcerations, for persistent indigestion, or of any wart or mole that shows sudden increase in size or change in appearance.

"It is difficult to understand how men and women will have their automobiles overhauled regularly—a machine which can be taken apart and put together again, and in which parts can be replaced. Yet we neglect our bodies," he said.

Cancer in its early stage was the type considered in the main yesterday by the Jeannes Hospital surgeon. He told of the astounding decrease in number of cases of tuberculosis that can actually be picked out on the streets today, as compared to the large number a few years ago. "The doctors get the cases earlier, and are better able to control and cure them. So will a campaign of education aid in this fight against cancer."

Among the bits of information given were: "No person has ever recovered from cancer of his own accord. The cancer itself must be destroyed. There is no spontaneous cure of cancer; there is no short-cut to cure of cancer. . . . There are three ways of curing such, and cure in each instance depends on complete destruction of all the cancer cells." The three methods of cure destruction were listed by the surgeon as surgery, X-ray and radium. He added that the type of treatment is not for the patient to choose, but is a decision to be made by the doctor.

That pain has nothing to do with early cancer, and that although cancer does occur occasionally in childhood, it is more prevalent among those over 35 years of age, were other pieces of information offered.

"The woman who has cancer of the breast or womb diagnosed and treated early has a 75 or 80 per cent chance of keeping well, as compared to the one treated late, whose chance of keeping well is cut down to 20 per cent."

Dr. Teahan then, through the pictures, dealt with various forms of cancer—the breast, womb, lungs, skin, etc. He advised that any sore not healing within three weeks be shown to a physician. Although driving home the importance of examination of all lumps, he informed that many lumps are not cancerous. "But you want to be sure."

The pictures showed cancers in the early stages, with second pictures of the same cases showing cures, many having been cured from two to 12 years ago without any recurrence.

NOTES OF OPTIMISM

Among other outstanding bits of encouraging news, the Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly bulletin, hints that business is ready to end its recent decline, estimating that the current consumption of American factory products is at least as large as production.

The board disputes the notion held in some government quarters that business can not pick up until present large inventories in the hands of manufacturers or wholesalers are sold. It says consideration should be given to the fact that inventory accumulation, while rapid from September to the early part of this year, extended over only a short period; that in lines where activity is being sustained at high levels the volume of inventories required, including goods in process, is larger than last summer, and that during a period like the present it may appear advantageous, in the case of some commodities, to keep more inventories than usual.

Along with this view of the future, there appeared another expression of opinion from a different source. Charles F. Kettering, vice-president and research director for General Motors Corporation, told the monopoly committee in Washington that the nation has become "too gloomy" about the future. He suggested that inventors and new industries be given a free hand in solving the unemployment problem. He said a new type of Diesel locomotive engine did stimulate the railroads, and that housing construction and air conditioning promised great developments. He predicted greater improvements in the automotive industry in the next ten years than had been made in the last decade.

IN WAR "FOR DURATION"

Out of the thunder of guns and bombs in the North, and out of the almost impenetrable smoke of conflicting claims and of censorship, this much emerges as clear: Scandinavia is in the war "for the duration."

Certainly Norway now can find no peace while the major powers are fighting. For obviously a Nazi "peace" would be predicated on continued German military occupation of Norway; and that would make Norway an enemy belligerent, insofar as the Allies are concerned. In event of such a "peace" Norwegian soil would be a legitimate target for Allied sea, air and land raids and her ports would be subject to blockade. The same, of course, already is true of Denmark, whose King Christian is a brother of King Haakon of Norway.

If the Norwegians fight on and the Allies succeed in dislodging the German invaders, Norway will continue to be an enemy belligerent, from a German viewpoint and a target of renewed Nazi attacks.

So the only peace for Norway must be a peace which includes the rest of Western Europe, and the same is true in greater or less degree, of all Scandinavia.

Mr. Farley is a bit thoughtless at times. When he told a bunch of politicians at Dallas that during the next three months they must keep their feet on the ground, he failed to caution them to be careful and not step on their ears.

The first long-distance telephone call was made 56 years ago. I caused some talk at the time—am plenty since.

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

SYNOPSIS

Wealthy Sam and Helen Snow object to their daughter Gabrielle's interest in handsome Peter Parsons because he has no social background. Gabrielle thinks their disapproval unfounded because her father started as a roustabout in the Oklahoma oil fields before he made his fortune in oil. She becomes angry when her mother reminds her of her Uncle Gabriel's will, which stipulates that if Gabrielle marries before she is 21, she is not to receive his money until she reaches 35. With her Boston terrier, Odd, Gabrielle breakfasts at the drugstore where Peter works as an $18-a-week soda clerk. Peter is a talented pianist. Later that day, Gaby promises to meet him at 11 P.M. after he is through working. When Gaby's mother tells her that her father is giving them a trip to Europe, the girl wonders why she isn't enthused when it is what she always wanted. That evening, Gaby jumps at an invitation to a party at the home of her friend, Dorothy Mackey, for it will facilitate her meeting Peter. As eleven o'clock draws near, Gaby confides in Dot and prevails upon her to make it a foursome with her fiancé, Tony. In the rumble seat of Tony's coupe, Peter and Gaby decide to get married that night. But it is 3 A.M. when they reach the little town of New Iris—too late to obtain a license. After breakfast, they go to a hotel to freshen up. During a conversation with Gabrielle about her forthcoming marriage, Dot says, "You never have any trouble getting what you want. I'm only afraid you don't always know what you want."

CHAPTER SIX

When they emerged from their room, the first thing their eyes lit upon was a stiff settee, with two serious looking young men sitting side by side, staring at their door.

"Sorry to be late," sang out Gabrielle, noting that it had been nearly an hour since they had parted from the boys.

"Oh, that's all right," said Peter hastily. "We were hoping we hadn't kept you waiting. We went across the street and got the licenses. We had to wait for them."

"How many did you say?" inquired Dorothy, her black eyebrows elevating.

"Come here, Dottie," said Tony quietly.

Dorothy approached him slowly, her eyes glued to his.

"I got one for us too," he said softly. "Let's use it, Dot. What's the use of waiting?"

Gabrielle walked over to a window a little ways from them. Peter got up and joined her, slipping an arm around her waist.

"I love you so much, Gaby," he said humbly. "Are you sure you won't mind not having much to live on? That you won't mind a tiny apartment and doing your own work?"

Gabrielle turned away from the open window where small cottages were all that met the eye. Small cottages, with their loveliest flowers of the year. Gabrielle didn't stop to think that although in June the whole world was beautiful with greenery and the early flowers, only a few of them would remain during the hot summer months to come.

Peter looked fresh and not at all tired.

"I'll love it, Peter," she breathed. "I wish we could live in this very town and have one of those tiny white cottages, with the pink rambling roses!"

Peter laughed and held her close to him.

"We will have a home of our own some day, sweetheart. But—those probably aren't even modern, and the roses won't bloom the year around," he added whimsically.

She regarded him candidly for a moment. Yes, she told herself, he was probably right. Beautiful things like that only come once. Well, she smiled at him brilliantly she would take this beautiful thing and have it while she could. She would marry Peter, and if the roses wouldn't keep blooming...

It was a quiet little group that entered the parsonage a few moments later; two tall boys and two slender girls.

The reverend's wife and daughter acted as witnesses. The pastor himself, white haired and benign looking, performed the ritual with all the dignity that such a ceremony could desire. He blessed them in a soft musical voice.

When they came out of the parsonage, into the warm early June morning, none of them spoke. There seemed to be an enchanted spell woven about them, thought Gabrielle.

Peter looked down at her and smiled. Gabrielle smiled up at him, tremendously. She felt as though she

"Because I'd never have married you if I'd known you would have so much money. Now," he concluded charmingly, "you'll have to be dependent upon me!"

"Here's the hotel. Want to phone, Peter?" asked Gabrielle.

"Yes," he answered, getting out of the car.

"Let's not wire—let's wait until we get home to tell them," said Gabrielle.

"We might as well," answered Dorothy.

"I'll be back in a moment then," Peter said, and disappeared into the hotel.

"Oh, Gaby, I'll bet we get it," said Dorothy soberly.

Tony yelled, "What's the matter with you, Mrs. Parsons? Gone batty?"

might cry at the slightest provocation. Oh, she hoped she and Peter could find happiness. Not many did, but she hoped they would.

Driving around the square after the wedding was over Dorothy and Gabrielle both voted for Tony's suggestion that they wire their parents.

"If we only had our things, I'd be in favor of leaving for a protracted honeymoon right now!" exclaimed Tony.

"Oh—I must call the store at once," Peter exclaimed, and knocked on the window separating them from the front seat. "I'm not due till 10 o'clock but if I call now, Tom will substitute for me."

"Oh, darn the old store!" pouted Gabrielle. It had just occurred to her that Dorothy had married a very rich man's son, while she had married an orphan who worked for his living.

Suddenly she began laughing aloud hysterically.

Tony slowed the car down and in a turning around, yelled:

"What's the matter with you, Mrs. Parsons? Gone batty?"

"Oh, I forgot my Uncle Gabe's will!" said Gabrielle, still laughing. "I'm practically disinherited, my dears!"

"What do you mean, Gaby?" asked Peter, frowning.

She quickly explained to him just how her mother's brother had left her a fortune if she remained single until she had reached the age of 21.

The car was stopped and Tony and Dorothy were at the side of the car, listening.

"And you'll never get it?" cried Dorothy.

"Oh, yes, I'll get it," said Gabrielle, grimacing. "But not until I've reached the ripe old age of 35!"

"My hat!" exclaimed Dorothy. "And you two could certainly use it too."

"I'm glad of it," announced Peter. Gabrielle looked at him in quick surprise. "Why, Peter?"

Gabrielle was feeling sleepy, standing in the sunshine.

"What can they do about it now?" she asked.

"Don't worry, Dottie," Tony said comfortably. "I'll fix it with your folks."

"Oh—they won't in the least mind having you for a son-in-law," Dorothy said hastily. "They'll mind the way we did it."

Gabrielle's face sobered and all at once she dreaded going home.

"My folks will mind horribly, I'm afraid," she said.

Peter came back, his face wreathed in smiles.

"It's all right," he said. "I'm off for the day!"

They drove back to Tecumtelalla, and once more they regained their happy mood. They sang and laughed merrily, and persuaded Peter to sing one of his own compositions.

Stopping for a sandwich at a village hotel, they then drove on in a leisurely fashion. As they neared home, each of them became increasingly quiet. It was as though they were realizing for the first time how impulsively they had acted, the importance of what they had done.

Tony, after ascertaining where Gabrielle and Peter wished to go, let them out at the Snows' large, old-fashioned home. They said gay good-byes, then Tony's car shot off down the avenue, the motor purring powerfully.

Gabrielle turned to her new husband with something like dread on her lovely face.

"Don't mind, sweetheart," he said quickly. "I'll do the explaining, and take the entire blame."

"Dad won't be home now, I'm afraid," she said. "It's almost two o'clock. The car doesn't seem to be here either, so perhaps Mother's gone too. Well, she took a deep breath, 'let's face the music!'"

"SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY"

WILMINGTON—(INS)—The Wilmington City Solicitor is wondering whether there is such a thing as "southern hospitality." Last January, Wilbur P. Fisher, of Wilmington, fell unconscious in Prince George County, Va. He was taken to a hospital in Petersburg, and later transferred to the Eastern State Hospital at Williamsburg. When Fisher was fully recovered, the county bought him a bus ticket and sent him home. Now the county has rendered a bill to the City of Wilmington for Fisher's hospitalization and board.

SYNOPSIS

Gabrielle Snow, lovely 18-year-old daughter of wealthy Samuel Snow, an oil magnate, falls in love with Peter Parsons, a handsome young soda clerk. Peter, however, is a talented pianist, a promising vocalist, and aspires to become a composer. Gabrielle's parents object to the match because Peter has no social background. So— one night, while out riding with Gabrielle's friend, Dorothy Mackey, and the latter's fiancé, Tony, Gaby and Peter decide to get married immediately. It is 3 A.M., and they have to wait until the license bureau opens. Tony prevails upon Dot to make it a double wedding. After the ceremony, Gabrielle recalls that her uncle's will stipulated that if she married before she was 21, she would not get her inheritance until she became 35. "I'm glad of it," Peter announces. "I'd never have married you if I'd known you would have so much money. Now you'll have to be dependent on me!" They return home to face the music.

CHAPTER SEVEN

They walked up the long, wide walk and entered the cool, heavily awninged veranda. Gabrielle herself opened the screen door.

"Anyone at home?" she called gayly. At least, she meant it to sound gay. She wondered perversely why she didn't feel happy and excited as she had the previous night, and during the ceremony. Wasn't there any thrill to be had out of romance once you were married?

The swing door at the end of the long hall opened slightly and the white capped head of Violet appeared around it. Her black face was wreathed in gloom and her fat body sagged with forebodings.

"Where's Mother, Violet?"

"Dey's out lookin' foh you-all, Miss Gabrielle."

"Looking where, Violet?"

"Ah dunno," replied the slow witted Negress uncertainly. "Dey didn't eat no lunch, but tuck the eyar and went to look foh you-all."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" Gabrielle exclaimed in vexation. "Sit down in the living room, Peter. I'll see if they are at Dad's office."

Just at this moment they heard a car stop in front of the house, and Gabrielle went to the door and saw that it was her parents.

Helen Snow got out of the car and came up the walk in a near run. When she reached the front door, Gabrielle had it open for her. She threw her arms around her mother's neck.

Then she saw her father get slowly out of the car, and come up the walk, looking dejected and tired. Her heart gave a sudden leap. What had she done to these two who loved her? She hadn't meant to hurt them, but as usual, she thought miserably, she had impulsively gone ahead without consideration for them.

Sam Snow came into the hall and gazed questioningly at Peter, who stood in the doorway leading into the living room, and seemed undecided as to what was expected of him.

"I'm married Mother—Dad!" cried Gabrielle, her face flushing under their scrutiny. "Oh, I know you'll disapprove but, after all, you two got married at once when you found you were in love!"

Hating this defending herself before she was actually accused, she laughed unexpectedly when she noticed poor Peter standing by looking so embarrassed. Poor dear, she thought, he was more uncomfortable than she was.

"Mother and Daddy—this is my husband—this is Peter!"

Peter gazed intently at Mrs. Snow, but she only nodded coolly.

"Will you excuse me please?" she asked frigidly. She went toward the stairs leading to the upper part of the house.

"Come upstairs, when you can, Gabrielle," she added, and was lost to them around the curve in the stairway.

Three pairs of eyes watched her slim ankles in their brown and white shoes as they tripped lightly up the steps; then, simultaneously, Sam Snow, Peter and Gabrielle each breathed a little sigh of relief.

All at once Gabrielle wanted to laugh. It was as though small Helen Snow was the most powerful influence in all their lives. She noticed her father's dark countenance, and "I do though," stated Gabrielle furiously. She wasn't going to be dismissed like a small child, she thought. Wasn't she a married woman, and wasn't she entitled to be spoken to as an adult?

"Very well then," roared her father. "Come into the living room."

They went in, Gabrielle proudly leading the way. She faced them across the room, having taken a seat in the huge green damask wing chair which she knew enhanced her blonde beauty immeasurably. Peter followed her, and she felt a glow of pride in his tall, slim grace. His dark blue eyes were solemn, but they stifled her desire to laugh promptly. But she was enjoying the situation in a way, even though she resented her parents failing to rejoice with her at such a time.

"I'm sorry, sir, if I've upset all your plans for Gabrielle's future," began Peter in his soft, deep voice. "But—I'm not sorry I married her this morning!"

There was a quiet dignity in his tone, a proud spirit lay behind his words, thought Gabrielle with a small thrill of pride.

"This morning?" repeated Sam Snow quickly. "You say you were married this morning?"

"Yes; about nine o'clock, sir," answered Peter, flushing.

"Then," thundered the gruff voice of Sam Snow, "where were you all night, young man?"

Quickly Gabrielle interrupted, and explained. She told of the midnight ride, the steaks in the small night cafe, and the treshening up in the little hotel. Glibly she related the events, describing the lovely parsonage with its air of antiquity, its many vases filled with roses, and its quiet, sweet old occupants.

"It was a charming wedding, I assure you, Daddy," she finished. "It had all the respectability even you could ask for!"

"I'd like to talk with this young man alone," her father said.

Gabrielle's eyes flashed. Her lower lip protruded stubbornly and she narrowed her golden eyes in a resentful manner. Then she said angrily:

"Talk to him before me, or not at all, Daddy!"

"Now, Gaby," intervened Peter, "I don't mind, dear."

The Great Game of Politics

was at Hyde Park eight months ago. It was then Mr. Roosevelt told Mr. Farley definitely he would not run again, that he would retire at the end of this term and in January issue a statement to that effect. Instead of doing that in January, the third-term movement, managed by Messrs. Ickes, Corcoran and Cohen and apparently approved by Mr. Roosevelt, was well under way and Mr. Farley found himself in the dark as to what game the President was playing.

A NUMBER of times the President has had the opportunity to explain things to his old friend, but he has availed himself of none of them and Mr. Farley has not, his intimates assert, tried to pin him down. On the contrary, he has proceeded on the assumption that the President meant what he said last August, that he had not changed his mind and that he had something in view other than a third term, to which he knew Mr. Farley was opposed. Developing aspirations of his own, Mr. Farley acquainted the President with these long ago and told him in advance about his statement in Massachusetts announcing his candidacy.

THAT was a month and more ago. Since then he has been swinging around the country frankly meeting leaders and hunting delegates, praising the President but assuming he will not run again. But back in Washington and out in a number of States men close to the President, and others who have had long conferences with him, enter him in the primaries and conduct a genuine campaign in his behalf. It is a strange and unprecedented situation which has split the President's Cabinet and arrayed against him both the chairman of the National Committee and the Vice-President.

OF course, there are those who think that it is all a game, that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley really understand each other and are just as confidential as ever. But that can be ruled out. It involves a degree of deceit and duplicity inconsistent with Mr. Farley's nature. The truth is that, for reasons of his own, the President has chosen to put the Administration political strategy in the amateur hands of the so-called "inner circle" instead of in those of the faithful Farley, from whom until recently he had withheld no political confidence for ten years.

THAT gentleman would not be human—and he is very human, indeed—if he did not feel aggrieved at this kind of treatment. Nevertheless, by neither word nor deed has he given public expression to that feeling. Yet some time very shortly Mr. Roosevelt has got to send for him and talk. Whatever his plans, it is absurd to go into the convention with the chairman of the National Committee not understanding what the party leader is up to. The private talk, it is agreed, will come pretty soon. It will be sought by the President and the explaining, expounding and persuading will be done by the President.

THERE isn't any doubt about that. Nor is there any doubt that before the talk has proceeded very far the President will have to deal with his alleged remark that "Jim" is unavailable for the Vice-Presidency because of his religion. Fifteen days after that remark had been printed Mr. Roosevelt denied it, but the delay was such that the denial was not convincing. It is possible Mr. Roosevelt may be able to remove the hurt that that caused, but it will take some removing. Among the "inner-circle" boys are some who look forward to the "talk," convinced that "The Boss" can charm Jim into falling in line for the third term. But they are not those with the better mental equipment.

AT THE CAPITOL

HARRISBURG, Apr. 17—Governor James' recent statement that he would accept the Republican Presidential nomination if tendered resulted from a visiting New York reporter's attempt to sound out the Pennsylvania executive on his presidential hopes. . . . The story was not new, however, Governor James having expressed the same sentiment months ago. . . . At the same time he stated he was not a candidate.

The Governor will address the Indiana Republican Editorial Association at Indianapolis on April 26. . . . The Republican National Committee at Washington said he would speak on national affairs. . . . The speech will be broadcast over the NBC-Blue Network from 10.30 to 11 p. m. (E. S. T.). The Governor told his press conference that "I don't know who's paying for the broadcast." . . . The Governor is believed to have agreed to make the speech at the request of John D. M. Hamilton, G. School Directors Hear Health Talks at Spring Meeting ville, and A. C. Rutter, Perkins, took care of the details of the convention. Announcement was made that 41 districts in Bucks county were represented, or 72 per cent. Milford Township was the only district represented 100 per cent.

Anthony Rezonico, of Kintnersville, was elected to attend a meeting of the legislative council of the State Directors Association, representing Bucks county.

At the afternoon session Dr. A. O. Michener, superintendent of the Benjamin Franklin High School, Philadelphia, addressed the group on "modern problems." He particularly emphasized the importance of discipline.

"There has always been a problem in education and each generation thinks it has the biggest," he declared. Dr. Michener bitterly flayed the present laws passed as a result of the pressure of labor union, whereby young people are kept from learning trades and working for a living. As a result the cost of education by keeping boys and girls in school has increased.

"I have them in my school today who say, and I quote directly, 'don't bother me mister, I don't have to worry. The Government is going to take care of me.' The man who has manual skill has always had my respect, but today the cost of education is magnified by many crack pot ideas."

"We must devise some means for a new type of school, an occupational school to fit in with the rest of the system. Our country, my friends, was built by people who didn't expect the government to support them and if we don't change the direction in which we are headed along these lines we will get nowhere and our future is dark."

Dr. Raymond D. Tice, of Quakertown, an officer of the County Board, addressed the session of "Better Health for Our School Children in the Quakertown District."

The examination of which Dr. Tice spoke evolved itself as a result of the death of a school boy and athlete from chronic nephritis, or Bright's Disease. When he came under medical attention he was found to have an advanced form of kidney disease which proved fatal.

Dr. Tice explained that it was felt by the school physician, coach, and school authorities that there should be a more comprehensive examination for athletes so that such defects might be discovered in a more incipient form. It was also thought that if such incipient cases be referred to their family physician—the progress of the disease could be arrested, the health of the boy or girl be maintained and in many cases a life be spared.

During the course of the discussion, Dr. Tice said, this question was asked: "If a complete physical examination is so important for those who participate in athletics, why is it not even more important for the student who does not participate in athletics?"

This seemed a very good thought and as a result of this group discussion, plans were made in Quakertown for an examination of all the students of Junior and Senior High School. The only cost to the tax-payers for this was the cost of mailing certain results back to the Board.

Dr. Tice explained that the examination was conducted as follows: The height and weight of each student was taken without clothes. A thorough physical examination followed immediately—inspecting head, mouth, throat, neck, thorax, abdomen, genitalia, legs, feet and toes. In the case of boys this was conducted by a physician. The girls were examined by a graduate nurse who made record of all physical defects to be checked later by a physician, who

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

VEGETABLES are the one food that are relatively scarce. Many of the new crops maturing in Florida have been injured by a new freeze and hail storm so that instead of abundance only slight increases in supplies will be available until other states begin producing. However, supplies of canned and frozen vegetables are generous.

Large turkeys are plentiful and cheap and when chosen for church or community suppers are an important drawing card, says Miss Cora Anthony of the A&P Kitchen. For that postponed dinner party or buffet supper turkey is also a good choice. Fowl, too, is unusually cheap and plentiful. New crop ducklings cost no more than last year's frozen stock did a few weeks ago.

Beef, fresh and smoked pork and veal are very reasonable in price but lamb prices are not so attractive. The fish strike still awaits settlement. Eggs are plentiful and low in price.

Here are three dinners at different price levels:

Candied Sweet Potatoes Spinach

also examined head, mouth, throat, and neck of the girls. Each child then gave a specimen of urine for which separate labeled containers had been furnished. The child then dressed and presented himself, or herself, to another station where a record of vision was taken.

Then to another station where ears were examined by otoscope for wax, perforation, or retraction of tympanum of ear. They then proceeded to another station where a blood pressure reading was taken and recorded and finally a heart examination was conducted, first by listening to the heart by stethoscope before exercise, then after exercise by running around the gymnasium. Each child was then asked to fill out a card of the past medical history and previous immunology.

Dr. Tice said that he explained the examination in detail in order to know that under proper organization this can be conducted with a minimum confusion and loss of time. Boys and girls in Quakertown were examined on alternate days. Children were classified according to grade and "home" rooms so that each "home" room teacher could be given a copy in order to check with the child to see that defects were corrected. A standard chart of height and age was used to compute standard weight and all those under normal were considered underweight.

A notation was made of those wearing glasses and in these cases vision was tested with their present glasses and a record of defective vision was made when it existed in those wearing glasses or in those who had no glasses. Teeth were inspected for cleanliness and lack of care. Tonsils were marked absent, present, small or diseased. Urine analysis included complete examination also a microscopic study when albumen was present.

Dr. Tice announced the following summary of the examination: Total number of children examined, 724 or 100 per cent; number of girls examined, 371 or 51 per cent; boys examined, 353 or 49 per cent; ages of those examined, 11 to 19 years; number underweight, 368 or 51 per cent; wearing glasses, 86 or 11 per cent; defective vision, left eye, 78 or 10 per cent; defective vision, right eye, 99 or 12 per cent; number with defects of teeth, 113 or 15 per cent; number with defects of teeth, 113 or 15 per cent; number with tonsils removed, 192 or 26 per cent; number having enlarged or diseased tonsils, 72 or 9 per cent; number having blood pressure above 130 systolic, 43 or 5 per cent; number having organic heart disease, 8 or 1 per cent; having albumen in urine, 90 or 12 per cent; having 4 plus albumen in urine, 3 or 27 per cent; having plus 3 in urine, 4 or 55 per cent; having regular casts in urine, 3 or 42 per cent; having hyaline cast in urine, 3 or 42 per cent; having sugar in urine, 1 or 13 per cent; having white blood cells in urine form 1-35, 90 or 12 per cent.

Number having wax in ears, 35 or 4 per cent; physical defects, 93 or 12 per cent; having had diphtheria, 49 or 6 per cent; had whooping cough, 49 or 6 per cent; had scarlet fever, 89 or 12 per cent; had small pox, none; had mumps, 374 or 51 per cent; had German measles, 83 or 11 per cent; had measles, 632 or 87 per cent; had chickenpox, 497 or 68 per cent; had immunology from scarlet fever, 67 or 9 per cent; had immunology from small pox, 724 or 100 per cent; had immunology from diphtheria, 208 or 28 per cent.

Under obvious physical defects the following were noted: Intensive burn scars, congenital deformities, extensive acne, enlarged cervical glands, nasal obstruction, lipoma, inguinal, umbilical and femoral hernias, large moles, impetigo, staphylococcus, and chorea.

This entire examination was conducted without expense to the school district except for that of mailing a report to the parent. This report was signed "Quakertown School District" in order to prevent publicity of the physicians making examination. The entire personnel for this examination

"In Quakertown we feel that more comprehensive school examinations should be made yearly," Dr. Tice declared. "The results of these examinations should be summarized in order to present a true picture of the current findings, and that state of health from year to year may be properly compared."

"That 51 per cent of our children are underweight must be recognized, in the six years of the Hitler regime, and efforts be made in the ensuing year to reduce this high percentage. Plans must be made to adequately care for the 12 per cent with visual defects and 15 per cent dental care. The fact that 12 per cent of those that were examined had albumen appearing in their urine is too high to ignore. "It is felt that if nothing more had been discovered than the presence of considerable amount of albumen and cast in the urine the examination in our district would have been worthwhile. It is our intention to continue these examinations yearly and to check back carefully that the defects may receive the proper attention."

REFUGEE INFLUX

ST. LOUIS—(INS)—Between 95,000 and 100,000 refugees from Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Italy and other dictator-ruled countries have come to the United States since the outbreak of the Hitler regime.

Dr. William Haber, executive director of the National Refugee Service, Inc., said here recently. Dr. Haber addressed the National Association of Deans of Women, in convention in St. Louis.

Labrador Branch of Guild
Plans Display in Eddington

The Labrador Section of the Cornells Branch of Needlework Guild will hold its annual meeting and exhibition garments on Tuesday evening next, eight o'clock, in the Eddington Presbyterian Church.

This meeting is also the opening session of the Sixth Annual School of Sessions held in Eddington Church. The Rev. Frederick Maser, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Frankford, will be the speaker. Last summer, the Rev. and Mrs. Maser took a trip to Labrador, bringing back pictures of the trip and of the work of the Grenfell Mission in Labrador, which will be shown in conjunction with the talk on that work.

All are invited to attend the meeting and see the display of garments.

IF POPEYE HAD A GARDEN
HE'D GROW THESE GREENS

If Popeye were a gardener he would not confine himself to spinach, as a peep-builder-upper. Green leaves which are appetizing when well cooked all have value in the diet, and there are several different kinds which can be easily grown in the home garden.

In 25 days after planting you can be harvesting Tendergreen, a variety of mustard, which produces large green leaves which, like Swiss chard, can be cut from the plant without disturbing the root, to be followed immediately by another crop.

There are several varieties of mustard, maturing in 30 to 40 days, which are popular for greens. They have a pungent flavor which is especially popular in the southern states, where greens have been a dietary standby for generations. Most of the mustards will keep bearing until frost.

Spinach takes longer to mature—40 to 50 days—and does not like hot weather. It is harvested by pulling up the plant by the roots, so that one crop is all it yields. Sow just as soon as the ground can be worked, in rows a foot apart, and thin out to six inches between the plants. A crop for fall may be sown in July, and will find the cool autumn weather to its liking.

Swiss chard is a species of beet which produces an insignificant root, but luxuriant broad leaves, which have a distinctive flavor which many like better than other greens. Chard may be cut off at the ground, and the roots will send up a new crop of leaves several times during the summer. It is highly esteemed for young children during the hot weather when spinach is difficult to grow.

New Zealand spinach is not a spinach, but a tropical plant which botanists call tetragonia expansa. It should not be sown until the ground is fairly warm, and then it should be given plenty of room, 2 to 3 feet between plants. In the northern states it grows to remarkable size, so that a peck of greens can be picked from a single plant once a week until frosts come.

Garden sorrel is a hardy perennial which bears edible leaves considered by many to be delicious. It should be sown in drills eighteen inches apart, preferably in light shade, as hot sun is said to increase its acidity. The roots should be divided every four years.

To continue the greens program into the late fall and winter, sow in June seeds of kale or borecole. Transplant to rows with two feet between plants. It takes 110 days to bring plants to maturity, but frost improves the flavor and the plants continue to bear long after other greens have been killed.

street, spent Sunday and Monday in Wilkes-Barre, attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Edith Cavan.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Allison, Morrisville, were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoffman, Pine street.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Mzyrinski and son Stanley, Philadelphia, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Vodarski, Hayes street.

Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moffo, Farragut avenue, were Mr. and Mrs. J. Gibson, Union, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Stolz, East Orange, N. J.; and Mr. and Mrs. E. Hoffman, Cornwells Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Arvidson, Bloomfield, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. William Schmidt, Westfield, N. J.; Mrs. Mae Welk and Mrs. Maude Oates, Irvington, N. J., and Albert Arvidson.

Newark, N. J., were entertained last week by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cooper, Wilson avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall, Collingswood, N. J., were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. William Dought, Cedar street.

Roy Bailey, Jr., Jackson street, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller, Burlington, N. J.

Ruth Bailey, Jackson street, week-ended with Mr. and Mrs. Wright Carlen, Tullytown.

OLIVET, Mich.—(INS)—Writing 150 letters of application took Olivet College student Harold L. Moore two weeks. The letters netted a stack of returns and seven definite job offers. Moore accepted the best.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

A real Rhett, from Charleston, S. C., home of the fictional Rhett Butler, of "Gone With the Wind" fame, is playing in her first motion picture.

She is Alicia Rhett, descendant of a family long famous in Southern history, and her first screen role is in the Technicolor production of "Gone With the Wind," coming to the Grand Theatre, starting Sunday.

It was Miss Rhett's family, so the story goes, that contributed one-half of the fictional Rhett Butler's name. David O. Selznick saw Alicia acting in the Dock Street Little Theatre in Charleston and signed her for the role of India Wilkes in the film.

Clark Gable is playing Rhett Butler in "Gone With the Wind," and one of Miss Rhett's first days was spent working in scenes with him. As India Wilkes, she plays the sister of Ashley Wilkes, portrayed by Leslie Howard.

BRISTOL THEATRE

A number of new songs make their appearance in "South of the Border," which comes to the Bristol Theatre for a run of two days starting today, with Gene Autry in the lead.

OWLS WIN SECOND GAME IN TWO DAYS; DEFEAT FALLSINGTON

Bensalem Walks Off With Second Game of Season by Score of 9 to 2

ASHTON PITCHES AGAIN

Owls Pile Up 25 Runs and 24 Hits in Two Games

FALLSINGTON, Apr. 17.—Two games in two days, two victories and no defeats. That's the record hung up by the Bensalem Owl batsmen when they added the Fallsington Falcons to their victory list by trouncing them here yesterday afternoon, 9-2.

True the record is by no means amazing. Nothing even to brag about. But the manner in which the triumphs were chalked up is the thing that has coach George Riemer and the Owl followers feeling light and airy these days. Both decisions were scored over clubs that hope to make a strong bid for the upper division title of the Lower Bucks County League during the season about to open.

In the two battles the Owls have piled up 25 runs, blasted out 24 hits, and have had a perfect fielding record thus far. Beside that the pitching has been of fine calibre. Gene Ashton, who hurled the last three innings against the New Hope club on Monday, came back to toss curves at the Falcons over the entire seven inning route and thereby chalk up his initial triumph of the young campaign.

NAT'L LEAGUE RACE TO BE KNOCK-DOWN AFFAIR

(Editor's Note: Herewith is the second of two articles by Lawton Carver, International News Service Sports Editor, on the prospects in the major league pennant races, which opened yesterday. Today the National League.)

By Lawton Carver
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, Apr. 17.—(INS)—Any one of the six clubs could win the National League pennant this season, or could flop with a pronounced thud into the second division in a campaign that seems likely to be characteristic of that circuit—a knockdown, drag-out scramble all the way to the payoff wire. Last season the Cincinnati Reds clinched the championship by a margin of 4½ games over the St. Louis Cardinals, but many observers refused to believe that the Reds were the better club. Hence, the Cards have been established as the probable pace-setters.

However, the ultimate winner will land on top only after a bitter struggle that probably will involve every club in the league, except the Boston Bees and the Philadelphia Phillies, who have been tabbed for a little battle of their own—a battle for the cellar. Right now, in keeping with custom, the Phillies have it by right of conquest.

As for the rest, it may be the Reds again, or the Cards, but each of the other two first division clubs, the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Chicago Cubs, must be figured as fair contenders, and the New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates appear as mild threats harbored by numerous qualifying "ifs."

It is significant that between the first place Reds of last season and the fourth place Cubs there was a gap of only 13 games, or four fewer than the margin by which the New York Yankees bested out the second place Boston Red Sox in the American League.

Changes in the National League lineups since last season could play a heavy part in outcome of the battle, but the race should end about like this as we see it:

St. Louis, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia.

The Cards have a power team, but are uneaten in many spots. The Reds will rely on the pitching of Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters and Gene Thompson. If they fall the Reds are sunk—but deep.

If you want the best long shot of recent years here it is—the Brooklyn Dodgers to win the pennant.

TEXACO BOYS' CLUB IS FORMING BALL TEAM

The Voltz Texaco Boys' Club announces that it will again form a baseball team this year. This club will be represented in the Bristol Suburban Baseball League for the second consecutive year. Manager Jim Cooper will have quite a few candidates. The catchers trying for the team at present are: Anthony Boccardo, Daniel Mazzillo and Eugene Mount. The infielders are: Joseph Sallustio, Fred Fanini, John Schweizer, Wendel Tazik and Harry Berry.

The outfield will be patrolled by George Pollock, Arthur Kramos, Harold Shackleton, Vincent Boccardo, George Salapka, Ted Sak and Donald Crohe. The pitching staff will be centered around Samuel Kershaw who is the only remaining pitcher from last year.

Other prospective pitchers this year are Albert Boccardo, Harold Shackleton, James Cooper, Gaget Kryven and Walter Zemeski.

William Petrick, Andrew Moore and Joseph Kaynak, members of last year's team, will perform for the Tullytown F. D. baseball team this year. Private John Sak and Private Edward Crohe, also of last year's team, have enlisted in the United States Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, N. J. Harry Goodwin, a former Texaco pitcher, is now a member of the Thurin baseball team of Trenton.

The opening game will find Texaco opposing the Holmerburg Ramblers at Holmerburg on Sunday, April 28. Arrangements are being completed to get the Northeast Ravens of Philadelphia to play in Bristol on Sunday, May 5.

Sometime during the latter part of May the gasoline boys will travel to Fort Monmouth, N. J., where they will encounter the U. S. Army Signal Corps baseball team. Before the season is over the Texaco team expects to have played at least fifty baseball games.

Well, folks, the regular bowling season of 1939-40 has come to a close. Only the playoffs remain to keep the local keggers in action. We understand that these are to be rolled within the next few days.

Although the regular schedule has been completed it does not seem to have dampened the ardor of the local lads and lassies. We stopped in at the alleys one night last week and found every alley occupied. We bet that there will be plenty of summer bowling this year.

Large headlines in the morning papers announce the rolling of a perfect game by a Dayton, Ohio, bowler at the national tournament in Detroit. We're glad to hear it; incidentally this is the seventh such game rolled since the beginning of these national affairs. It was also noted that the "impossible" 7-10 split has been made no less than three times.

One of the members of Madison and Ford V-8 teams recently marched to the altar. Congratulations, Bud, but you'll have to get the little lady more interested in bowling so you'll be allowed out a few nights.

Ralph Ratcliffe informs this column that the Banquet Committee has acquired a swell show for that event. It better be good, boys.

A team from Bristol traveled to Frankford on Friday evening and handed three games to the city aggregation. Did you find 3 and 4 alleys tough or didn't you get the breaks?

That's about all, folks, we'll return again next week with a few more interesting items. Come out and root for your favorite teams in the play-offs.

GAS MASK OUTPUT

STOCKHOLM.—(INS)—Sweden's production of gas masks is 8,000 a day or about 200,000 monthly. This number, which is manufactured at three different plants, is aimed for civilian use.

Pan-American Day Is Celebrated By Class

the pupils what Pan-America stands for, and announced the different players.

The characters were: Pan-America, Henry Black; Co-operation, Harold Hunter; Friendship, James Cochran; Happiness, Jack Tranotti; Future, Carlo D'Emidio.

The countries were represented by: Ambrose Burger, United States; Angelo Nocito, Costa Rica; James Cochran, Argentina; Harold Hunter, Cuba; Francis DiVita, Brazil; Ralph Furness, Haiti; Herbert Reeves, Peru; Paul Dennen, Honduras; Harvey Peltz, Mexico; Jack Tranotti, Ecuador; John Gallotto, Venezuela; Vincent Stellato, Colombia.

The program closed with a parade of the nations. The boys drew and colored the flags used in this parade.

Once each year, on April 14, in all 21 Republics of the American Continent, a day is set aside to commemorate the bonds of friendship and peace uniting the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Pan-American Day in 1940 was of special significance for it marked the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Pan-American Union at the First International Conference of American States. It also marked 50 years of progress in the development of closer economic, cultural, and juridical relations among the American Republics.

"A few years ago I wouldn't have thought of attending a meeting dealing with control of cancer. We were afraid to speak of it." She then mentioned how the Women's Field Army is co-operating with the State Department of Health in forwarding this educational endeavor.

"The Women's Field Army for Control of Cancer was started by the American Society for Control of Cancer, the women uniting to secure further information on cancer, learn of its control, etc. . . . The field army is organized to help get the message across. We can aid through education. The army has doctors speak upon this subject, as members of the army are lay-people. . . . We can't have too many people working together to fight this demon, when you consider that cancer kills 150,000 people a year in our country. The work may appear difficult now, as any pioneer work does, but we are trying to bring the cancer message in such a way that it breaks down the fear. Instead of a banner of fear let us hold up the banner of hope and courage, for hope comes through early attention."

Dr. Mary Lehman, who represented the Bucks County Medical Society at this meeting, said in part: "We want improved medical care, and a step in that direction is early diagnosis."

Mrs. Harry H. Headley stated that plans for the mother and daughter banquet are in progress and that Mrs. Black, the state president of the Union, will address the assembly at that time. After the Aronic benediction, the meeting adjourned.

Miss Ellis favored her guests with two solos. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess.

Bristol Girl Found Ill In A Trenton Doorway

found a bottle partly filled with poison in the doorway. The police said the purchase had been made from a drug store.

In discussing the case today Mr. Tamburello, father of the girl, said that he believed that his daughter, who is employed in the Manhattan Soap Company's plant, here, had gone to Trenton yesterday and met her boy friend. "I guess they had an argument," said Mr. Tamburello, "and perhaps as a means of scaring him she took poison." The boy friend resides in Trenton.

CHEVROLET'S Exclusive VACUUM-POWER SHIFT

easiest of all gearshifts to operate...

80% Automatic...Only 20% Driver Effort!

Because ITS ACTION IS EASIEST!

Tests prove Chevrolet's to be the easiest steering column gearshift to operate. Compared with the two cars next in sales, Chevrolet requires only 2.8 ft.-lb. of effort for a cycle of shifts, against 8.5 for Car B and 14.8 for Car C.

Because ITS LEVER AND ITS "THROW" ARE SHORTER

Because Chevrolet's gearshift is operated by vacuum, it requires less leverage. The lever and its travel or "throw" are the shortest, and that means the quickest shift. Length of Throw: Chevrolet, 4 1/4"; Car B, 7 1/2"; Car C, 10 3/8".

Because IT'S EFFORTLESS IN TRAFFIC

Stop and Go—Red and Green—Halt! Start! That's traffic. And that's where Chevrolet's easy shifting is appreciated. Vacuum does 80% of the work; only 20% is done by the driver. No tugging, no shoving!
